Edmund Haislmaier, Senior Research Fellow, Heritage Foundation

An expert in health care policy and markets at The Heritage Foundation, Edmund F. Haislmaier frequently is asked to help lawmakers design and draft specific reforms to the health system.

Haislmaier's expertise includes health care tax policy, Medicare, Medicaid, foreign health systems, pharmaceuticals and health care price controls.

Haislmaier, who works on related bills with both state and federal legislators, developed innovative strategies for states to create consumer-centered health insurance markets by using their authority to regulate insurance.

Under his design, employers may opt to enroll workers in a state health insurance "exchange,"

Haislmaier is in demand as a speaker at conferences on health policy and has testified before numerous federal and state legislative committees. A frequent guest on radio and television news and talk shows, his commentaries have been published in The Washington Times, New York Post and National Review Online among many others.

Before rejoining Heritage in 2005 as a research fellow, Haislmaier worked as a health policy consultant from 1998-2004 and was director of health care policy in Pfizer Inc.'s Corporate Strategic Planning and Policy division from 1994-1997.

He originally came to Heritage in 1987 as the think tank's first policy analyst for health care. He was named senior policy analyst in 1994. He was promoted to senior research fellow in 2007.

Haislmaier is a member of the board of directors of the National Center for Public Policy Research. He holds a bachelor's degree in history from St. Mary's College in Maryland.
